Melbourne's Living Museum of the West was founded in 1984 and is an incorporated entity. The Museum's Constitution sets out the following Statement of Purpose:

1. To continue the work of an ecomuseum within the context of Melbourne's Western Region, being a concept whereby the total community, its environment and its heritage are considered as part of the Museum, focusing the main emphasis on people of the region rather than on artefacts, and operating from one or more fixed bases throughout the region.
2. To develop a greater understanding of the history and culture of Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal peoples and the environment of Melbourne's Western Region.
3. To record and present the history of working people in Melbourne's Western Region, up to the present day.
4. To involve the people of the region in the collection, research, and presentation of this history.
5. To use a wide range of presentation methods including exhibitions, video, publication, theatre, public events and other participatory activities.
6. To be a multicultural museum.
7. To relate to the historic sites and structures of the region.
8. To develop a Heritage Resource Centre for the region.
9. To undertake linking and bridging activities with other groups, projects, and institutions in the Western Region.

In addition to the above, the Museum is also seen to have the following broad museological aims:

10. To act as a catalyst to the development of ecomuseum activity in Australia.
11. To develop and promote community museum activity which is interactive and innovative.
12. To develop the techniques of presenting exhibitions and related activities as effective communication devices.
13. To undertake pilot projects in a number of areas within the ecomuseum context on an experimental basis.
